AMERICAN FORCES LAND IN JAPAN

Airborne Troops Preparing For Arrival Of MacArthur

[Reuter and A.P. Reports.]

THE FIRST AMERICAN OCCUPATION TROOPS HAVE LANDED IN JAPAN, IT WAS ANNOUNCED EARLY THIS MORNING.

Ten transport planes landed on the Atsugi airfield, eighteen miles from Tokyo. Three of the aircraft carried special communications equipment.

The ten planes were the first of 48 which are taking troops to Atsugi in preparation for the formal occupation at General MacArthur's official entry.

Four-engined transports and Flying Fortresses carried the troops, who were commanded by Colonel Lackey. About 150 technical specialists made up the initial landing party.

The communications equipment will enable the signal corps specialists to get into immediate communication with the advanced "Stagg area" at Okinawa.

An Allied armada of 112 British and United States warships was waiting last night in Sagami Bay, expecting orders to move into Tokyo Bay "at any moment," said an American radio commentator with the fleet. The first seaborne landings on Japan are timed for 10.15 p.m. (I.S.T.) tomorrow.

The mighty Allied armada is drawn up in three great columns across broad Sagami Bay, and is bustling with preparations for the first seaborne landings, Reuter's Special Correspondent on board H.M.S. Duke of York cabled last night.

The first ship to move its anchorage was Admiral Halsey's flagship, U.S.S. Missouri. She anchored two miles offshore after the morning rendezvous with a Japanese destroyer bringing emissaries with details of shipping channels, minefields and coast defences. The Duke of York, flagship of the British Pacific Fleet, flying the flag of Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, anchored four minutes after the Missouri and a short distance from her. The American battleships, Iowa and South Dakota, and the British battleship, King George V, moved to anchorages near their flagships, while destroyers edged closer to the shore.

There was an impressive scene when a tiny Japanese destroyer, with 21 Japanese emissaries on board, came out to meet this vast fleet. The Japanese vessel, the Hatsu Akura, had the muzzles of her guns depressed as ordered in the surrender terms. Throughout the operation most of the guns of the fleet were trained on the Hatsu Akura, and from the bridge of the Missouri Admiral Halsey watched through binoculars as the Japanese were taken to the flagship.

The Japanese emissaries, who submitted charts of the entrance to Tokyo Bay, were told they must identify all shore guns with white flags in and around the naval base.

"Any violence or resistance by the Japanese will be held to be a mutinous act against the orders of the Emperor, and will be dealt with by force," Admiral Carney, according to an A.P. correspondent, told Captain Takasaki, head of the Japanese surrender delegation.

Allied bomber pilots on reconnaissance flights over Japan, according to an A.P. Correspondent, reported that half of Japan's remaining fleet — 28 warships — are anchored in the Western Kyushu Port of Sasebo awaiting formal surrender.

Preliminaries for peace in South-east Asia and the Indies were signed and sealed this morning by the plenipotentiary from the Japanese southern armies, in the name of the Commander-in-Chief, General Terauchi, at Saigon.

WHITE CROSSES

U.S. patrol bombers have seen the pre-arranged white surrender crosses painted on the runways at Truk and the white flag flying on Ocean Island, south of the Gilbert group.

The Japanese forces on Bougainville laid down their arms last Wednesday, according to Tokyo Radio, which said that isolated garrisons in the Solomon Islands are still apparently unaware of the "cease fire" orders.

At least 140,000 Japanese will surrender on the Australian battle fronts, if the estimates of the Japanese envoys are correct, Melbourne Radio, quoting an Australian Army statement, said last night.

Last night's Soviet communiqué said that in the Far East there were no material changes, and that over 30,000 Japanese surrendered. Units of the Soviet Fleet were reported to have anchored at Port Arthur.

AMERICAN PLANS FOR GERMANY

GENERAL EISENHOWER defined the aims of the United States Army of Occupation in Germany yesterday at the opening of a three-day conference on military government in the U.S. zone, presided over by Mr. Robert Murphy, U.S. Ambassador at Large.

"We must understand what we are doing in Germany," General Eisenhower said. "The army, until May 8th, had a job—to whip the enemy. Since then its job has been to support the military government."

Declaring that the army is in Germany to give the maximum co-operation and co-ordination to the denazification and demilitarisation of the German people, General Eisenhower said, according to Reuter, that this was not only the military objective but was something which was wanted by public opinion both in the United States and in the world at large.

Col. Hayden Smith, Deputy Chief of Staff of the U.S. Military Government, stated that Government officers must see that active Nazis do not live better than their neighbours and that clearing of rubble and other menial unskilled labour must be done by Nazis who have been removed from office. "These policies are to be intelligently and vigorously carried out by all of us," he declared.

"Very careful" Nazi arrangements to secrete property for subversive activities and to conceal assets in Germany and abroad which could be used to revive the German war machine," were described by Col. Bernstein, director of the finance division of the U.S. Group Control Council. "For example," he said, "investigators seeking foreign assets have disclosed evidence of the use of private funds and businesses for espionage.

"We have actually in our possession papers showing that I. G. Farbenindustrie—the big German dye and chemical trust—put spies on its payroll in subsidiary companies abroad. We have found written evidence proving that American citizens have been selected for positions in an American company, actually German-owned and controlled in order to give it an aura of respectability and conceal its true ownership. We have found a written agreement by which a German agrees to become an American citizen in order to operate in the United States and preserve the property of a German company from confiscation, should war break out, with the understanding that he should be restored to his German citizenship as soon as he returns."

General MacArthur's Headquarters

A DESPATCH from Admiral Halsey's 3rd Fleet, quoted by New York Radio last night, stated that it was learnt that Emperor Hirohito's Palace near the coast on Sagami Bay would become General MacArthur's H.Q. in Japan.—(Reuter.)

Preparing For United Nations Organisation

The Executive Committee of the Preparatory Commission of the United Nations met for over three hours in London yesterday, discussing the machinery under which it should work, and adjourned until to-day. Fourteen countries were represented. Its most important task is to prepare for the meeting of the new world organisation, the time and place of which have not yet been fixed.

Mr. P. Noel-Baker, Minister of State, the British delegate, said that two things were essential: "First we must bring into being an International Civil Service, wholely dedicated to the service of the United Nations; and, secondly, we must see to it that men and women in every country are kept in touch with our work."

Major-General E. P. Nares, former Commander of the second district in Italy, arrived in Berlin by air yesterday to take over command of the British troops in Berlin, and to act as British representative on the Allied Kommandatur.

He succeeds Major-General L. O. Lyne, who held these posts, together with the command of the Seventh Armoured Division, the "Desert Rats," who is moving to Itzehoe, about 30 miles north-west of Hamburg.

Explaining his move from Berlin, General Lyne said that the approach of winter made it impossible satisfactorily to command the Division with its H.Q. near Hamburg, and also to fill the posts in Berlin. He added that they wanted to take up as little room as possible in Berlin this winter in view of the great overcrowding.

Pax Romana Congress

Spanish representatives are among one hundred delegates from all over the world, who are attending a five-day congress of the Pax Romana movement, in the Jesuit Church Hall, Farm street, London. This is the first time the congress has been held in London since 1928.

Subjects before the congress include relief and rehabilitation and strengthening of the Pax Romana movement.

Franz Werfel, the Austrian author of "The Song of Bernadette" died suddenly at his home at Beverley Hills, California, yesterday.

Persecution of Clergy in East Germany

Several thousand Protestant clergy have been evicted from areas in the East German provinces of East Prussia, Danzig, Brandenburg and Silesia, stated reports reaching Berlin yesterday. About 100 have been permitted to stay in Berlin, but most of them are trying to move with their congregations.

In the Polish-controlled part of the Brandenburg province, in which Berlin lies, between 20 and 30 of several hundred evicted Protestant clergy have been taken for forced labour, it was added.

Some Protestant churches in parts of Eastern Germany, taken over by the Poles, are being converted into Catholic churches for the Polish population, the reports stated.—(Reuter.)

ELEMENTS OF DANGER IN PACIFIC

DECLARING that the situation in the Pacific continues to have many elements of danger, President Truman yesterday, in a letter to the Chairman of the Senate and House Military Affairs Committee, warned them against "either relaxing or discontinuing conscription in the United States."

He urged them, says Reuter, to stimulate enlistments and also to continue the conscription of all men between 18 and 25, inclusive, for a two-year period.

"It is certain that 800,000 men will be insufficient to meet the overall requirements," President Truman stated, and added, "The estimates of General Eisenhower and General MacArthur alone total 1,200,000, exclusive of the numbers required for supporting troops in the United States and other areas."

President Truman also issued an order calling for the earliest possible release and free dissemination of scientific and industrial information gained from Germany and Japan. "The release of such information should continue to be subject to the requirements of national military security," the President stated, and added: "Enemy scientific and industrial information covers all information concerning scientific, industrial and technological processes, inventions, methods, devices, improvements and advances obtained in enemy countries regardless of origin, or in liberated areas if such information is of enemy origin or has been acquired or appropriated by the enemy."

The President's order followed the disclosure by the British Ministry of Information and the United States Office of War Information of many secret weapons which Germany had under development or in a state of completion. It means that the details of Germany's experiments with atomic bombs of transatlantic range will be shared and made public when the joint Chiefs of Staff decide that it is safe to do so.

Quisling Adjudged Sane

Vidkun Quisling was yesterday pronounced sane by two eminent Norwegian doctors who examined him at the request of the presiding judge. Photographs of his brain were taken.

Quisling is considered too weak to appear in court to-day, and the resumption of his case has been postponed until to-morrow, when the public prosecutor will begin his case. Afterwards Quisling will be permitted to speak in his own defence. His speech may take two or three days.

The verdict is not expected until September 3rd.

Gimle Palace, Quisling's residence in the hills outside Oslo, was visited yesterday by his judges. The purpose of the visit was to investigate his claim that he had lived in "austere simplicity."

In court, Quisling had described his residence as "just a little villa with a few rooms on a patch of ground." What the judges found was a 20-room, £1,250,000 fortress, with concrete defences, machine-gun emplacements, a radio transmitter, and enough food for six months.

The place is a strange mixture of an eighteenth century German prince's castle and an American millionaire's home, states Reuter's special correspondent. Side-by-side with Louis XV apartments, rich with marble, silver and old masters, are spacious, glistening, tiled bathrooms, equipped with sun lamps and rowing and other slimming equipment. The old-style green window shutters are made of bullet-proof steel. The space where the dungeons would be in a normal castle contains an air raid shelter.

Quisling's picture collection included one Rembrandt, two Rubens, and a number of Italian old masters, including Giorgioni Tiepolo.

The castle now belongs to the Norwegian State. At present it is occupied by General Thorne, Commander of the Allied land forces in Norway, and his British and American staff.—(Reuter and A.P.)

Big U.S. Navy Cut

Mr. James Forrestal, United States Secretary of the Navy, announced last night that the United States Navy intends to reduce its personnel from 3,700,000 to 550,000 within a year.—(Reuter.)

French Forgery Network — The French Police have discovered a forgery network operating in Paris and large provincial cities. Some hundred millions worth of forged francs have been seized and numerous arrests made. The forgeries are said to be bad imitations of American printed notes recently put into circulation.—(Reuter.)

Charged With Divulging Radar Secret

A LUFTWAFFE officer, who interrogated R.A.F. men at Dulag Luft, an interrogation centre in Germany, told an Uxbridge (Middlesex) court martial yesterday that an air gunner, accused of having aided the Germans while in captivity, had not been a good helper.

Called by the prosecution to give evidence against Flight-Sergeant Jack Alcock (32), of Manchester, the officer, Lieutenant Gustav Schlichtigroll, disclosed that some of the cells at the camp were fitted with microphones. Alcock, he said, was heard speaking to other prisoners in such a way as to induce suspicion among them when he asked them to fill up forms on behalf of the German authorities.

Alcock pleads not guilty to nine charges of having voluntarily aided the Germans while a prisoner. On four of them the death penalty can be imposed.

Squadron-Leader Goff, outlining the case, said that Alcock was shot down on September 5th, 1943, during a raid on Mannheim. He was interrogated and told that if he answered questions and did some work for the Germans he would be given certain privileges and better quarters, and would have a measure of freedom about the camp. He was asked to take round a question form to other prisoners-of-war, which contained questions about squadrons, groups, commands and stations, and other matters of that nature.

PROSECUTION'S CASE

"The case for the prosecution was that Alcock, when interrogated, gave information as to his squadron, station, and matters of that nature; gave detailed information about Halifax aircraft and Radar equipment, known by the name of Monica, which was then on the secret list; and agreed to do work for the Germans by taking round the forms during the whole period he was at the camp, between seven and eight weeks.

Alcock, in his statement, described how "a man speaking English without an accent, and dressed in civvy clothes," saw him and said that he was from the Red Cross.

"He asked me if I would like better quarters. I said 'yes.' He said he would let me have them if I gave him details of aircraft and operations, and he would let me have my parole to go outside the camp. I agreed to this, and answered questions regarding the Halifax cruising speed, armament, bomb-load, endurance, height of flying to target, and details of Monica. I told him the number of planes in the squadron and the number of planes of my squadron on the raid.

"GIVEN PAROLE"

"I was then moved to a better room in another block. I was given a civvy jacket and civilian shoes, and I received better food and marks to buy tooth paste, soap and shaving-kit. I was given a parole.

"While I was there I helped the man I believed to be a Red Cross official by getting on six different occasions British air crew prisoners-of-war to fill in the false Red Cross forms."

The hearing was adjourned until to-day.

SPECTACULAR SCENES AT MILITARY TATTOO

THE PRESIDENT, the Taoiseach, most of the Ministers of the Government and some twenty thousand other Irish men and women went to the Royal Dublin Society's Showgrounds at Ballsbridge last night to see the Military Tattoo. Earlier in the day many of them had been to see the Military Exhibition, which is also being held in the R.D.S. Both the Tattoo and the Exhibition began a fortnight's run yesterday; both are in aid of the Army Benevolent Fund.

From start to finish the Tattoo was a success. The evening was clear, mild, and ideally suitable; the arrangements went without a hitch.

A few minutes before 8.30, when the Tattoo was due to begin, the announcer, speaking in Irish, said: "Ladies and Gentlemen, the President." A fanfare of trumpets followed, and the President and Mrs. O'Kelly, in evening dress, entered the jumping enclosure in an open carriage. They drove slowly right around the enclosure to enthusiastic applause, and then took their seats on the Anglesea Stand near the Taoiseach. When the President had taken his seat, the national flag was hoisted in the enclosure, and the Tattoo began.

First came the massed bands, 360 strong, marching ten deep, a solid block of instrumentalists, dressed in the saffron kilt, in the ordinary green Army uniform, in the ceremonial blue uniform, playing pipes, drums, brass instruments, fifes, playing them in perfect unison. After the "Tattoo March," Major Sauerzweig conducted a new fantasia, "After Duty."

The second item, "Battle Training," began as a lecture from the announcer on modern assault tactics, illustrated by slowly-moving camouflaged troops, and ended in a realistic, ear-splitting confusion of mine and shell explosions and rifle reports, which, according to the commentator, was just the impression it ought to give. Soldiers defending a strong point had to face machine-gun and mortar fire, and even attack from armoured cars, tanks and heavy artillery; the defenders lost the day, and the strong point, a most realistic house, was most realistically blown sky-high.

Some 600 members of the Local Defence Force—all trained in their spare time—gave a precise and workmanlike display of Sokol physical training.

The display of riding by the "cavalry of to-day" showed the manœuvrability of the modern motor-cycle. Ranging from figure riding to trick acrobatic cycling, the show ended with a round-the-course jumping event, in which four officers took the jumps—even the double bank—on their cycles, first singly, then in pairs, and finally all four together in perfect unison; there were no faults, and not one of the riders had to put a foot to the ground.

A display of ceremonial infantry drill was followed by the cavalry awaited "Battle of Benburb" scene. The brilliant uniforms, the students, the shinging armour, the prancing horses, made the spectacle colourful, if a little confusing; the only impression of the battle one gained was that when Munro's men charged twice they were each time driven back with surprising ease, but when the Irish charged Munro's forces in return, the English forces were completely routed with equal ease. Munro was accompanied for some time by a riderless horse; the horse, having lost his rider in the preliminary stages of the fray, carried on bravely for a while, and then gave it up as a bad job and retired quietly behind the lines.

The Tattoo ended with a procession of soldiers of Ireland through the ages, from the Fianna — complete with wolfhounds—to the men of the present day—complete with armoured cars.

Special rail transport facilities were provided for the public, but the cycle parking arrangements might easily have been less chaotic.

Berlin Death Sentence By British Court

The first death sentence by a British court, since the British entered Berlin, was passed yesterday on Joseph Halabuda, a Pole, aged 23, for being found in possession of firearms.

Halabuda was sentenced by a British Summary Court, which also sentenced Ernst Alsleben, a German, to life imprisonment for having had an automatic pistol.

Halabuda's defence was that he had been in Dachau and Buchenwald concentration camps and had been given a pistol by a Russian officer to hunt Nazis.

EXHIBITION OPENED BY PRESIDENT

MANY Dubliners, their appetite for State ceremonial whetted by the recent presidential inauguration, lined the streets yesterday afternoon to watch President O'Kelly drive through the city to open the military exhibition at Ballsbridge, while shops and business-houses, getting the spirit, put out more flags. Some of the people were disappointed to find that the President was not accompanied by the usual cavalry escort in ceremonial blue uniforms; the substitute motor-cycle escort was faster and more precise, but less romantic. Nine aeroplanes, roaring overhead in formation, divided public attention between the streets and the skies.

All of the Irish Army units were represented by the Captain's Guard which gave the presidential salute on Mr. O'Kelly's arrival; the No. 1 Army Band played the National Anthem.

The President and Mrs. O'Kelly were received by the Chief of Staff, Lieutenant-General D. McKenna; Major-General H. MacNeill, Colonel S. Magauren and Colonel D. J. Lawlor, and on their appearance on the balcony of the Main Hall were greeted by a trumpet fanfare.

OPENING SPEECH

The President said that the Military Tattoo and Exhibition had been organised with two main objects in view: the first was to assist in providing funds for the Army Benevolent Fund, and the second, to afford an opportunity to the public to see at close quarters the technical exhibits of the various Army Corps and the historical exhibits of arms, weapons and equipment.

Mr. O'Kelly said that an examination of the exhibits and of the various forms which preparations for defence assumed could not fail to excite in people a deep admiration for, and sense of gratitude to, those of their countrymen who obeyed the call of duty and gave up their personal liberty to devote themselves wholeheartedly to the task of fitting themselves to meet the grave danger which confronted the nation. By their untiring efforts during the past five years they had, under Providence, shielded the nation from untold misery, suffering and privation.

"Thank God," said the President, "the danger has now passed, and the demobilisation of our Army reservists and volunteers is about to begin. On leaving the Army, however, many of these men will find themselves faced with difficulties, anxieties and uncertainties, due to the long period of absence from their normal occupations. The time has, therefore, arrived when we are called upon to display some tangible proof of our appreciation of their work and to acknowledge in a practical way the debt of gratitude we owe them."

Mr. O'Kelly said that, although the Government had made generous financial provisions for their re-settlement, undoubtedly there would be cases in which demobilised members of the Forces would find themselves in needy circumstances. Fortunately, there was a fund—the Army Benevolent Fund—specially equipped to deal with such cases. This Fund was originally formed to deal with the needs of a small, peace-time Army; but the Minister for Defence had recently reorganised the machinery of the fund to arrange such functions as the Tattoo, which would give the civil population of Ireland an opportunity of showing their appreciation and gratitude for the services rendered during the emergency by the officers and men of the Defence Forces.

"I commend these functions to their generosity, and call for the whole-hearted support of all sections of our people," he said.

The President was thanked by Mr. O. Traynor, Minister for Defence, who said that he had no doubt that the people would respond in the traditional fashion to the President's appeal and that the necessary funds would thus be secured.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Kelly watched the traditional ceremony of the Changing of the Guard and then moved around the exhibition. Among the other visitors present were Mr. de Valera and most of his Ministers.

THE EXHIBITS

The exhibition, one of the most attractively-presented shows of recent years, represented all phases of Army life, and the exhibits ranged from a Hurricane fighter-bomber to a decorative photograph frame in fretwork, executed by a soldier in his spare time. There were rifles, machine-guns, heavy guns—many of them sectioned—tanks and armoured cars, aeroplanes, and all types of armament and equipment, on view in one part of the exhibition; in another place there was a selection of engineers' equipment, including pontoon bridges; on the balcony were examples of paintings, photographs and craft-work and model-making by soldiers.

"Midget" Submarine's Exploits

A BRITISH midget submarine, the X-24, which has a crew of four, and carries detachable explosive charges, twice penetrated into the harbour of Bergen, Norway—one of the most heavily defended ports under German control—and sank a 7,500-ton merchant ship, a floating dock, and a smaller merchant vessel.

The story of these daring and hazardous missions was released yesterday. The X-24 is similar in type to the X craft which damaged the Tirpitz in Alten Fjord in September, 1943.

On April 10th last year the X-24, with Lieut. M. H. Shean, R.A.N.V.R., in command, got into Bergen Harbour and laid a charge under the Barenfels, which was berthed at a coaling jetty. The explosion sank the ship and caused considerable damage to harbour installations. The X-24 then withdrew without being detected and returned home safely.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet described the operation as "a magnificent achievement, ably planned and most daringly carried out."

Lieut. Shean was awarded the D.S.O. for the exploit.

On September 11th, 1944, the submarine, then commanded by Lieut. H. P. Westmacott, D.S.C., R.N., of Bembridge, Isle of Wight, sank a floating dock in Bergen Harbour.

During the approach to the target Lieut. Westmacott was able to read through the periscope the "wreck warning" attached to the mainmast of the sunken Barenfels. Charges were released under the floating dock, which was destroyed, as was a small merchant vessel alongside. The X24 then withdrew, and undetected, made her way through the fjords to the open sea.

For this exploit, Lieut. Westmacott was awarded the D.S.O. "for great gallantry in a most hazardous operation."

Damaged Vessel Beached.—The 16,000-ton Dutch motor ship, Christian Huygens, which was reported to be sinking after an explosion in the engineroom, has been beached off Westkappelle. Sixty, out of a crew of 290, stayed to aid with the beaching. The others entered lifeboats and some of them were picked up by the Dutch steamship Tibia. One oiler is missing.—(Reuter.)

New York Welcomes de Gaulle

Reuter and Associated Press.

MORE than 2,000,000 people welcomed General de Gaulle yesterday to New York.

As the General and his party drove to the City Hall torn paper and ticker tape were showered upon them in the city's financial districts.

At the City Hall, Mayor La Guardia presented him with the scroll of honorary citizenship. General de Gaulle, in return, conferred the French Legion of Honour on the Mayor and on Mr. Newbold Morris, President of the City Council.

When the General was being entertained at luncheon given by the city authorities 300 detectives were on duty.

At the luncheon General de Gaulle said: "As long as we stay together I am not afraid of peace. We must know that problems of peace bring us possibly as many sacrifices as war; but, fortunately, sacrifices of a different nature."

More Internees Released

THIRTY-TWO internees were released from Belfast Prison yesterday, bringing the total released to 179. The number remaining is 50.

Coroner to Ask for Beach Watchers

When a verdict of accidental death was returned in Londonbridge road Morgue yesterday on James Smith (30), national school teacher, Druminaspec, Bailieborough, Co. Cavan, who was drowned at Skerries on Tuesday last, the Co. Dublin Coroner, Dr. J. P. Brennan, said that he would recommend to the authorities the appointment of beach watchers to save lives. He added that Mr. J. W. Lauder should be very highly commended for his efforts not only in this case, but in other life-saving cases.

Mr. Lauder said that on Saturday last he was assisted by a Mr. Loare in recovering the body between the springboard and "the Captain's." There was no life-saving equipment of any kind there, and the weeds were about 20 feet long.

James Corr, Seatown place, Dundalk, said that he was swimming at the springboard when his attention was drawn to a man who was in danger of drowning. He helped the man along for about 15 yards, but the man then became panicky, and after climbing on to the witness's back was washed off. The witness did not see him again.

Peter Goodman, Dundalk, said that when he saw the man struggling in the water he ran for help.

Mr. Seamus McDonald, Castleblayney, brother-in-law of the drowned man, said it was a scandal that there were no facilities for life-saving in and around Skerries. He knew that if a warning notice of any kind had been erected his brother-in-law would not have ventured in.

Superintendent Glynn said that a lifebuoy, which was there last year, had been removed, probably by youths.

Minister's Attitude Annoys Woodworkers

The Executive Committee of the Irish National Union of Woodworkers have passed a resolution protesting against the failure of the Minister for Local Government and Public Health to reappoint the Most Rev. Dr. Dignan, Chairman; Senator T. Foran and Senator Mrs. H. Concannon, to the National Health Insurance Committee.

"We maintain," the resolution states, "that the Minister's attitude in this matter has been in the true Fascist tradition and in conflict with the principles enshrined in the Constitution."

The resolution calls on Mr. de Valera "as a first step towards remedying the injustice," to remove Mr. MacEntee from office.

Bradshaw Out To Equal Moran's Record

By J. P. ROONEY

THE year's big golf in Dublin comes to an end this week with the Irish Professional Championship at Newlands on to-morrow and Thursday.

The late Michael Moran won the title five times, 1909-1913, inclusive, but the biggest entry during that period was 32 at Portmarnock in 1913. Things have changed since then. For this week's championship there are well over 50 contenders from the four provinces, with a very strong Ulster representation.

The holder, Harry Bradshaw, whom we expect to finish well up in the list at St. Andrew's on September 21st, has been unbeaten for the last four years. He had a small marginal victory over Joe McCartney at Dun Laoghaire last year; a little more steadiness by the Ulster man on the last few holes and the title would have changed hands.

The prospects for another close finish at Newlands are exceedingly bright. It has been an exceptionally heavy year's work for Bradshaw, but a particularly successful one. Naturally, the strain has been telling on him, but he hopes to equal Moran's record, and have a few days' rest before leaving for St. Andrew's.

Fred Daly—and rightly so—is regarded as a real menace to the champion, but the Balmoral man is more at home by the seaside; still, at Belvoir Park a few weeks ago, he showed that he also can reel off a fine score under inland conditions.

One that Newlands will suit is the long-hitter and former champion, Joe McCartney; then there are James McKenna, Christy Kane, Eddie Hackett, Adam Whiston, Jock McLachlan and J. Duggan.

The issue is in the lap of the gods, but on form it looks as if it will be a ding-dong fight between Bradshaw and Daly. The first pairs go off at 11 o'clock and 2 o'clock to-morrow.

IRISH RUNNERS AT YORK

OUR Curragh Correspondent states that Sir Percy Loraine's Ebor Handicap candidate, Ekvad, will leave the Kildangan stables, Co. Kildare, on Thursday for the York meeting, to be held next week.

Mrs. A. P. Reynold's Lady's View, winner, among other events, of the Phoenix Plate of 1,500 sovs., is under orders to leave on the same day. The Clonbarron-trained filly is engaged in the Nunthorpe Stakes.

ST. LEGER BETTING

There was a very small attendance at the Victoria Club, London, yesterday, when the cards on the St. Leger and Ebor Handicap were called over. Very little business was transacted.

The Manton colt, Stirling Castle, was favourite for the St. Leger, at 3 to 1, but the price was not taken. Rising Light and Naishapur were joint second favourites at 4 to 1, after 9 to 2 had been accepted about each to small sums.

Not a bet was struck on the Ebor Handicap, for which the King's horse, Fair Glint, was nominal favourite at 6 to 1. Abbot's Fell, who will run at Newmarket to-day, unless the going is considered too hard, was offered at 7 to 1. Next call-over will be on Friday at 2.15 p.m.

St. Leger—3/1 agst. Stirling Castle (o.), 4/1 Rising Light (o., 9/2 t.), 4/1 Naishapur (o., 9/2 t.), 5/1 Chamossaire (o.), 7/1 Blue Smoke (o.), 25/1 others (o.).

Ebor Handicap—6/1 agst. Fair Glint (o.), 7/1 Abbot's Fell (o.), 8/1 Reynard Volant (o.), 8/1 Trimbush (o.), 10/1 others (o.).

Tipperary Backs Face Brilliant Attack

By PAT'O

NOWLAN Park, Kilkenny, and Gaelic Park, Thurles, are centres of county life as I write, and so keen is public interest that the All-Ireland hurling final record attendances may go by the board. Cork, leaders in title records at 15, are closely followed by Kilkenny and Tipperary at 12 each—the other counties are so far away as not to matter.

When Tipperary beat Cork at Thurles and broke their attempt at five championships in a row, it was felt that one or other of the Leemen's nearest rivals would narrow the gap in 1945. Since then, Tipperary beat a stout Limerick team in the Munster final, but did not shine in beating Antrim—probably the Munster champions were pulling their punches.

Kilkenny sailed home against Dublin's moderate side in which stars lacked lustre, and the Noremen went through their hardest game at Birr, where a powerful Galway side ran them score for score.

BELOW USUAL STANDARD

The defeat of Cork by Tipperary was the biggest surprise of the year, but the fact is that Cork were a foot-weary, listless team on whom four years' unbroken success and long travel had told their tale. My impression of Munster hurling this year is that the standard was not high. Dominant so long, the lean Southern period may be here for a session—victories over Waterford, Cork and Limerick have not the usual Munster hurling significance to my mind.

Tipperary's front lines have given selectors an overflow of trouble. Every alternative has been tried without striking the ideal blend, and it may be that if the game is not going well in the second half for Tipperary next Sunday, young Morris and Kenny, brilliant minor wingers, may be called into service.

Tipperary backs are the best, longest and sweetest hitters in the country, even with Johnny Ryan off. And I think the finest hurling of the hour will develop between Tipperary backs and Kilkenny's brilliant forwards—short of inches, but best in the country—Mulcahy, O'Brien, Walton in front; Riedy, Lanigan and Gargan on the 40 line.

STAR MARKSMAN

Lanigan, their most elusive scoring man, whose hurley seems glued to the ball, has not run such a clean bill of health as his admirers wish. He was well shadowed at Birr by Brophy of Galway.

A young student called Maher, who shone in a tournament game against Wexford, may be called on round Kilkenny's centre-field. Burke of Tullaroan may be centre-half to steady Kilkenny's weakest line.

Tipperary were never more confident; that great hurling county is 100 per cent. behind them, meaning much to Tipperary men, who smothered Kilkenny at their last meeting—Kilkenny, 1937.

Two months ago in these columns I was bold enough to select Kilkenny (hurling) and Cork (football) as finalists amongst 24 teams. They are both in the finals, and we will leave it at that.

HARD-FOUGHT MATCHES IN JUNIOR TENNIS

AN unusually high proportion of closely-fought matches marked the second day's play in the Irish Junior Tennis Championships at Fitzwilliam. J. O'Reilly and D. Williams, last year's under 15 winner, played 42 games before O'Reilly came through. He had to fight back all the way, for Williams, after taking the first set, led 3-1 in the second and 4-2 in the third, but failed to hold on to his advantage.

O'Reilly's game is inclined to lack punch, but he is better equipped all-round than Williams, whose severe forehand drive is offset by a very weak backhand and a wretched service.

The favourite for the boys' title, G. Rice, had to put in plenty of work before shaking off the challenge of a small Belvedere boy, A. Ryan, in the second set. Ryan was almost as steady as Rice, but could not place the ball as accurately as the Leinster champion.

There were two lengthy battles in the senior girls' event, Veronica Miley and Monica Moran occupying the centre court for most of the afternoon before the former won, while Daphne Littledale just got home against Sheelagh Mathews. Miss Miley, daughter of an Irish international player, suffers from the usual disability here of extreme weakness on the backhand. Results:—

Anderson (Mercer). Play is by strokes over 72 holes with the better ball of the couples counting at each hole. BRILLIANT CENTURY BY HAMMOND

W. R. Hammond has seldom played a more valuable innings for his side than he did yesterday at Lord's, where he hit 121 for England against the Dominions. Despite his feat England were 20 runs behind on the first innings. Three times Hammond drove Cristofani to the pavilion for six, and he also hit ten fours during a stay of two hours forty minutes.

The Dominions finished 165 runs ahead with seven second innings wickets in hand. Scores:—

Part-Time Telephone Workers' Demands

Thirty part-time male workers in the Exchequer street, Dublin, Telephone Exchange have refused to work any more overtime. They are demanding the abolition of the part-time system, and their engagement as full-time servants.

Mr. W Norton, T.D., General Secretary of the Post Office Workers' Union, has raised the question in the Dail, and it is understood that the position is now being examined by the Post Office authorities, and that an early adjustment of the trouble is likely.

The disputes in the laundry, meat and pork industries in Dublin continue. The offer by Miss Louie Bennett, Secretary of the Women Workers' Union, to have the claim of the laundresses referred to a court of inquiry is regarded in trade union circles as a direct challenge to the employers, who, so far, have not agreed with the Minister's proposal for a conference.

More meat shops have been opened by the Workers' Union of Ireland.

Irish News in Brief

Cow-stealing Charge.—At Kilmainham yesterday, John Gorman, Bow Bridge, Kilmainham, was remanded to September 24th on the charge of stealing a cow, valued at £40.

Sentence for Begging.—A suspensory sentence of one month's imprisonment was passed by District Justice Hannan in Dublin yesterday on an elderly man for begging.

Manslaughter Charge.—At Kilmainham yesterday, Denis Murtagh (28), Ranelagh, Dublin, was remanded on bail to September 9th, charged with the manslaughter of Miss Kathleen Lanigan (28), Bluebell, Inchicore, on August 3, who, when cycling, was struck by a motor van alleged to have been driven by him.

Creating a Bad Impression.—When a man was fined 7/6 with the alternative of seven days' imprisonment, in the Dublin District Court, for interrupting the free passage of pedestrians at Amiens street on the arrival of a train from Belfast, Inspector Michael Farrell stated it created a bad impression on visitors when people crowded round them wanting to carry their luggage.

Use of Motor Van.—Samuel Farbenbloom, rabbit and poultry dealer, Palmerston Park, Dublin, was fined £10 by District Justice Mangan in Dublin yesterday for having permitted his motor van to be used at South Great George's street, in a manner not in accordance with a permit of the Minister for Supplies; and Martin Quinn, Killeen road, Rathmines, driver, was fined £2.

Theft from Baths.—In the Dublin District Court yesterday, Senior District Justice Hannan sentenced Michael Marjoran (18), Durrow road, to one month's imprisonment with hard labour on a charge of having stolen from a cubicle in Blackrock Baths last Sunday a shirt and pullover, the property of Stephen Dunne, a visitor from London; and discharged another youth, Bernard Higgins, Charlemont street, who had been jointly charged with Marjoran, on probation.

Belfast Workers' Holiday.—Belfast General Purposes Committee yesterday decided that municipal employees should receive their third day holiday for victory in Europe on September 4th, the day when the freedom of the city will be conferred on Field-Marshal Montgomery. Essential services will be maintained, and the workers concerned will receive another day in lieu of the holiday.

Dublin Man Receives M.B.E.—Mr. T. Tanham, R.E., son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Tanham, of Jamestown road, Inchicore, has been awarded the Order of M.B.E. The notice in the "London Gazette" announcing the award says that Mr. Tanham's unswerving loyalty to his job and the abnormal responsibility vested in him in the preparation of maps was an inspiration to all who worked with him.

Apple Imports Again.—Apples may be imported under licence from next Saturday until July 15th, 1946. The Minister for Agriculture has made an Order revoking the Import Order of 1941, which means that the importation of raw apples will not be subject to quantitative restrictions. Persons, or firms, who are in a position to import apples should apply to the Revenue Commissioners, Dublin Castle, for a licence.

Cemetery Consecrated.—The Bishop of Achonry (the Most Rev. Dr. Morrisroe) has solemnly blessed and consecrated a new cemetery at Kilcolmen, Ballaghaderreen, Co. Roscommon.

Cigarette Shortage Eased

Londonderry's cigarette shortage eased momentarily yesterday, when a number of tobacconists received quotas from one firm. One tobacconist sold his five weeks' ration, amounting to 22,000 cigarettes, in a little over an hour, at the rate of ten per customer.

Another tobacconist sold 10,000 Turkish cigarettes, costing five shillings per 25, in a few hours. Londonderry tobacconists are receiving supplies on a 1939 basis, and attribute the shortage to the number of women smokers and the scarcity of forces duty free cigarettes.

TOBACCOS OUT OF FAVOUR

TRADING was of modest dimensions on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday. Irish securities were quietly maintained but a good deal of uncertainty prevailed in the British industrial section, following the announcement of the end of lease-lend benefits. Tobaccos were mostly affected.

Home Government Funds held steady. There was small selling of Banks, and both Munster and Leinsters and Provincial Old shed pence. Guinness units recovered to 147/-.

Home Rails enjoyed quiet support. Gt. Northern Ord. firmed up to 28¼, and the Deb. advanced a point to 90. Coras Iompair Deb. reached a new high record of 100¼.

Far Eastern Bonds An Active Market

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.

MARKET conditions were patchy, on the resumption of business on the London Stock Exchange yesterday. British Funds, as is the experience just now, showed a fair amount of strength, while Chinese and Japanese Bonds were a distinctly firmer market. Argentine Railway Prior Charges also attracted attention, but British Industrials, apart from Coal and Steel shares, were weaker, as a result of the end of Lease-Lend.

Business generally was restricted. News that Russia will recognise the Chungking Government certainly produced a good feeling in the market for Chinese Bonds, and values for the securities advanced two to three points. Japanese Bonds were from 1 to 1½ points higher. In the Argentine Railway section, renewed talk of possible purchase of the British-owned railways resulted in a marking up of the Prior Charged stocks, but dealings were restricted. The purchase rumours were later denied by Sir Montague Eddy.

LEASE-LEND ISSUES

British Rails were slightly lower, where changed; but recent support given to Coal and Steel shares was renewed, and values moved further in favour of holders. Shares of companies which may be affected by the end of Lease-Lend turned distinctly dull. Tobaccos, for instance, were marked down quite appreciably. It is well known that the companies still depend very largely on supplies from the United States, despite the increased use of Colonial tobacco during the war

Store shares also reacted, on Lease-Lend news. Other issues, such as Radios, were lower in sympathy; but Textiles were fairly well held. Oils attracted little attention, while business in the Mining section remained restricted around previous price levels.

STEEL GROUP RESULTS

Outstanding among company results issued yesterday was that of Richard Thomas and Baldwins, the steel and tinplate manufacturers. A preliminary statement discloses that the net profit for the year to March 31st last is up by £79,476 to £819,599, and is arrived at after providing for taxation and including the net profits for the period from January 1st of the works taken over from Baldwins. The Profits or dividends from associated companies or overseas subsidiaries taken over are not included, however.

The dividend on the Ordinary shares is repeated at 12½ p.c. for the year. The 6¼ p.c. Preference receives another 3¼ p.c., making 10 p.c. (same), and on the 8,500,002 Ordinary shares allotted on January 29th last a dividend at the rate of 12½ p.c. per annum for the three months January 1st to March 3rd is recommended.

BRICK CONTROL GOING?

It was revealed by Mr. G. W. A. Miller, managing director of Eastwoods Flettons, at the annual meeting, that various restrictions imposed on the brick industry during the war may be removed.

It is hoped shortly, said Mr. Miller, to reach some basis of agreement between the Minister of Works and the industry which will eventually permit the withdrawal of all artificial limitations on manufacture and distribution, such as have been imposed during the war years.

TREPCA MINES

A large number of speculative investors are interested in the shares of Trepca, Ltd., the Yugo-Slav base metal proposition. News of the cancellation of existing mining concessions in Yugo-Slavia came after business hours on Friday. The 5/- units were, naturally, a nominal market at first yesterday, but dealings were subsequently possible and a final quotation was 8/3, as compared with about 9/- on Friday. Dealings were arranged between 7/9 to 8/3. Stockholders may find some satisfaction in the absence of a heavier drop in the price. The market is inclined to take the view that everything is not lost, so far.

The fact that the law does not provide for expropriation of invested capital is rather a favourable point. The company, at the end of 1944, held British Government securities for £799,751, and cash for £51,651. Stockholders will, naturally, await further news with considerable anxiety.

RED TOWER BREWERY

The Red Tower Lager Brewery, Ltd., is again paying a final dividend of 5 p.c., making a total of 8 p.c. for the year to June 30 last. This is the same as for the previous year, which followed 6 p.c., and four years in which no dividend was paid. It is only in the past three years that the company has been prosperous.

Following a considerable improvement in trading profit in 1942, a capital reorganisation enabled the company to wipe out a debit balance of £70,552. Past losses reduced the charge for income tax, but these had been fully utilised at the end of the year to June, 1943. Thus in the past year the full charge against profits became payable with considerable effect on the net amount available for dividend. Profits, after providing for E.P.T., totalled £36,024, against £32,676 in the previous year, but, when income tax and other charges were provided for, the net income was only £8,855, against £17,241.

The capital of the company is now £180,000 in £1 shares. These are quoted rather nominally at 32/- — 33/-, the market being disinclined to do business until the full accounts are available.

Gibraltar Evacuees Leaving North. A further 300 Gibraltar evacuees will leave Northern Ireland to-day, and another contingent is expected to leave next month. The remainder of the 3,000 hope to leave before the winter.

FIRM CLOSE IN NEW YORK

THE Stock Exchange opened firm and active on Wall Street yesterday. Led by Motors, Steels, Rubbers and Chemicals, the market resumed its advance during the morning, with many Industrial favourites reaching their highest levels since 1937. The brightening prospects for peace-time prosperity apparently were the main drawing card for investors, who foresee a burst of consumer spending as the reconversion gap is bridged.

Advances near the close, which was firm, ranged from fractions to more than two points, while a few wider gains were in evidence. The turnover of 1,570,000 shares comprised 979 issues, of which 719 advanced and 118 declined.—(Reuter.)

HEAD, WRIGHTSON & CO.

Trading profit reported by Head, Wrightson and Co., Ltd., the Thornaby-on-Tees general engineers and steel workers, again showed an increase in the past year rising to £228,023, against £202,982. Taxation, however, takes the bulk of the increase, the amount required being £165,000, against £145,000. The dividend is again made up to 6 p.c., the same as for each of the war years.

Before the war, dividends had recovered to 10 p.c., after some years, in which no payment was made. The company has been actively engaged in war work, and, in combination with other companies, has taken part in the rehabilitation of two derelict shipyards, and fabricated, launched and fitted-out 225 craft for the Admiralty.

The company has an issued capital of £484,130. Its 6 p.c. Preference shares, of which there is £169,130 in issue, are quoted at about par.

The Minister for Industry and Commerce has made an Order reducing the maximum price fixed for scrap lead.

Now he says he never felt better...

—pain in his hands and feet had kept him awake most nights says C.L.

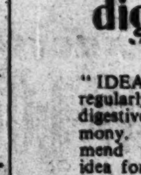

Without any question Mr. C.L. seems to have found the way to keep well. He says: "... I was so bad with rheumatism that I thought I would have to give up work, as the pain in my hands and feet kept me awake most nights. I had tried almost every known remedy... Then... advised me to try Fynnon Salt. I did so. At the end of the first week the pain had lessened and I was sleeping better. I realised I had found a remedy for my rheumatism and continued with Fynnon Salt. At the end of a month my rheumatism was gone and I never felt better in my life...." Yours faithfully, (Signed) C.L.

A tasteless powder, harmless to denture and user, it will hold your dental plate in correct position for many hours, thus obviating painful and embarrassing situations. FROM CAPITALISM TO "MANAGERIAL AGE"

Addressing Dublin Rotary Club yesterday, Mr. Julian Rowntree said that neither capitalism nor socialism would last indefinitely. Capitalism could not go on, because it was no longer able to use its own technical ability, and was unable to deal with unemployment. Free money transactions were rapidly vanishing, to be replaced by the barter methods used by Russia, Germany and Italy before the war.

"We are now in transition from a type of society which we have called capitalist or bourgeois, to a type of society which we may call managerial," said Mr. Rowntree. "This transition began in 1914, and was expected by some to end 50 years from then."

Senator F. M. Summerfield said that he regretted that the speaker had ignored spiritual values—"the only basis upon which the world could be saved."

"We feel that the less the State interferes with business the better it will be for business, and for the community," he said.

Mr. T. Mason, President of the Club, was in the chair.

DEMAND FOR BOOKS EXCEEDS SUPPLY

Libraries in Eire are finding it very difficult to obtain the number of books necessary to meet the demands of their readers; in some cases, it is understood, only about one-quarter of the orders placed are being supplied.

Librarians are preparing to receive the autumn and winter publications. The demand for books generally is increasing, especially for those on travel and biography. These are followed in popularity by history, economics, drama and general literature. Religious books are still being widely read, and books on modern invention, plastics and architecture are growing more popular.

Books by Irish authors, produced in Ireland, and racy of the soil, are a long-felt want, and those that can be got are very popular with readers.

The increase in the reading public still continues, but a slump in the reading of war literature is setting in.

With world conditions changing so rapidly, a librarian said that libraries are going to play a very important part in educating the public, in showing them what people in other parts of the world are thinking and doing.

Soviet Experts in China.—A party of Soviet industrial and mining experts have arrived in Chungking for talks on co-operation between the two countries, says Reuter.

"HOUSE FOR SALE"

Early last year the Governor of the Bank of Ireland said that prices of property had reached "fantastic" levels. Since that warning was given there have been few signs of a more cautious attitude on the part of investors and speculators. The recent tendency, indeed, has been towards higher, rather than lower, prices in the property markets, but, more especially, in what may be described as the market for "middle-class" dwellings in Dublin and other urban areas. A year ago sellers of such property were pleasantly surprised if they secured about 50 per cent. more than the pre-war price for their homesteads. To-day they are disappointed if the house agent fails to secure at least twice the price that ruled six or seven years ago; and there is reason to fear that even higher price levels may prevail before a supply of new dwellings helps to ease the pressure. Several more or less distinct, but related, factors help to explain these abnormal conditions. As in the case of other commodities, money values have changed. Inflation has reduced the average purchasing power of the pound sterling to somewhere about half of its pre-war value. Then, in a particular degree, scarcity has created more lively competition for the comparatively few dwellings that are for sale and ready for occupation by the purchaser. Added to these inflationary influences, there are the facts that houses to be let are extremely few, that members of the "newly rich" are able and willing to pay altogether extravagant prices, and that war conditions seem to have given a fresh impetus to the movement of population from rural to city areas. Thus the newly-married, or about-to-be-married citizen, and the head of an increasing family—already hard pressed to meet the rising cost of food and other necessities from a more or less fixed income—is faced with a combination of adverse forces that seem to have got beyond control.

That is a fairly accurate picture of conditions in Dublin and other Irish cities and towns. How do they compare with the state of things in Great Britain, where the destruction of hundreds of thousands of dwellings, and the influx of temporary populations, have given even a greater impetus to the demand for housing accommodation? Evidence of the British Government's grave concern about the whole housing situation, and of its intention to exercise drastic control of house prices, was forthcoming last week in the report of an official commission that was appointed in March. Prefacing its report with the statement that "estate agents and lawyers who submitted evidence said that no scheme of price control was practicable," the tribunal proceeded to review prices of dwellings that had changed hands at three or four times their pre-war levels, and to recommend a really drastic plan of price control. Provided that adequate staffs of official valuers can be recruited, says the Commission, "the maximum selling price of any house should be the value of the house, with vacant possession, at March 31st, 1939, plus 50 per cent." As a safeguard against evasion, it proposes that "the vendor and the purchaser should sign declarations stating that no additional payment has been made, and giving full particulars of any collateral transactions relating to the sale." Retrospectively, those who have purchased dwellings since 1939 should be allowed to sell at prices not higher than those they had paid. The scheme would apply to all houses with a poor law valuation of less than £90, and would continue for five years, subject to partial review after the third year.

The plan is, indeed, drastic, and, doubtless, will be resisted to the death by organised property interests. Nevertheless, it is in accord with the broad principles of rough justice on which the case was made for a Rent Restriction Act during the world war of 1914. While it may be represented as a further and unwarrantable invasion of personal liberties, it also may be regarded not only as a necessary means to limit the excessive demands of rapacious owners of property, but as a safeguard of purchasers who, impelled by the exigent need of shelter, may be tempted to incur a liability that will be impossible to discharge when normal conditions are restored. In one very important respect, the need to control the market-price of dwellings has become a matter of peculiar urgency. While substitutes of some kind may be found for unobtainable supplies of food, clothing or other domestic necessities, there is no such alternative to which the citizen in need of shelter can have resort. As things now are, and are likely to remain for some years to come, the demand far outruns all possibility of supply in the market for dwellings. Hence somebody must suffer. Either the seller must be compelled to limit his demands for profit, or the needy citizen must go without a dwelling. In any event, it can be hoped that the restriction of private enterprise and liberty will be temporary, and limited strictly to the period of emergency. When building materials are obtainable, and money values become less unpredictable, sellers and buyers of homesteads will be able to base their transactions on grounds less insecure than to-day's economic quicksands. Meanwhile, it seems to be abundantly clear that it is not less necessary to add homesteads to the present list of rationed and price-controlled necessities of life. Whether the British commission's plan represents the best instrument for that purpose, or whether it can usefully be adapted to conditions on this side of the Irish Sea, may be open to doubt. All that we are prepared, at this point, to say is that there is a clear and pressing need for action that will establish a reasonable balance between the legitimate demands of those who wish to sell, and of those who find it necessary to buy, modest homesteads.

DUBLIN THEATRES

Royal.—The best item in Royal Brocade No. 4 is a boxing ring feature by the Royalettes. The whole operation, from the erection of the ring, with four of the Royalettes as corner posts; the fight and the knock-out are done to music.

Olympia.—In a revue, "Happy Days are Here Again!" several of the performers who have been entertaining in past weeks appear again, with fresh support. Delaney and Milakoff were outstanding last night in a musical act, and the Dublin quartette, Jack Harte, Joseph Flood, George Miller and Brendan Kavanagh, were delightful in their harmony. Arthur Gannon in his banjo selections, June Holmshaw in her songs, and Meta Burns, the soprano from Belfast, were in favour with the audience. Cecil Sheridan, who wrote the dialogue, appeared in comedy sketches, with Paddy Tyrrell, Molly Condon and Paddy Kenny. A historical episode of 1798, "The Trial of Robert Emmet," was staged by John Stephenson, Jack Harte, and Seán O'Colleary.

Queen's.—"Irish Cavalcade" is an impressive story of 1914-1921, in twelve colourful scenes. Vocalists and chorus contribute a number of popular songs, while the Queen's Moonbeams give spectacular dances.

Capitol.—"Highland Fling," this week's stage show, has a distinctly Scottish flavour, with the Capitol Girls in kilts, and the vocalists, Martin Crosbie and Kathleen O'Keefe, singing appropriate airs. A newcomer to the Capitol, Miss Thelma Ramsay, plays the accordion with great vivacity.

THE TELEPHONE SERVICE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The Minister for Posts and Telegraphs has written to the Press to explain the cause of delay in the telephone service. While it is true that the Department of Posts and Telegraphs is seriously handicapped by lack of equipment, much could be done to minimise this handicap by the provision of a sufficiently trained staff so as to ensure that all operating positions available for telephone traffic were constantly staffed by experienced operators. But instead of having trained staff available—and reserves of such staff if necessary—it has been necessary for this union time and time again to press the Post Office to recruit more staff to cover the unstaffed operating positions, and to provide adequate reserves for retirements, holidays and sick absences. Grudgingly, some temporary staff was recruited, but long delays took place between the times it was decided to recruit them and their employment, and then it was necessary to train them in the highly technical and skilled work of operating at the Central Telephone Exchange.

Telephone operators are not born; the competent telephonist needs a long period of training. If the Post Office had taken time by the forelock it could have had its trained staff available to staff all operating positions all the time, and could thus have avoided the sporadic and haphazard method of recruiting staff—usually undertaken only when recruitment could no longer be avoided.

The best evidence that the telephone staff is still inadequate is to be found in the fact that the present staff are still being compelled to work overtime, and this also applies to the male night telephone staff.

A normal day's work in a busy telephone exchange, where the staff work ceaselessly under high pressure in attending to ever-pressing public requirements, is an arduous and nerve-racking experience, and even a visit to the exchange would confirm this fact. To ask telephonists, after an exhausting day's work, to work overtime against their will is to impose a severe hardship on them, and it is obviously unfair that they should be compelled to work overtime when additional staff could be recruited and trained, if only the Post Office would realise its responsibilities to the public and the staff. It is due to the splendid services of the latter, and their co-operation in the face of all difficulties, that greater delays in the telephone service do not occur.

The Post Office had a surplus of £247,000 on the telephone service last year. It is not too much to expect that it should use some of this surplus to provide adequate staff and better wages and conditions for those whose skill makes the telephone service possible. The failure of the Post Office to do so means that the public and the staff are the sufferers.—Yours, etc.,

W. NORTON,
General Secretary.
Post Office Workers' Union,

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—There has been a good deal of controversy lately about the inefficiencies of the Department of Posts and Telegraphs, and your reporter was told by the Department that any definite complaint received would have attention. I have a very definite complaint, which I made to the Department, and in view of the reply received, I feel that the matter should be made public. The following are the facts as reported by me to the Department:—

(1)—Before going on holidays I called to my local Post Office and asked for a form for re-direction of letters. The assistant searched but could not find a form. The next day I called to one of the main Post Offices in the city (the names of both offices were given in my report to the Department, but I refrain from publishing them) and was given a form, which I completed and handed to the assistant. Notwithstanding this, none of my letters was re-directed, and I found them all awaiting me on my return.

(2)—On July 23rd, at 10.27 a.m., a telegram addressed to me at a seaside resort some 45 miles from Dublin was handed in at Dublin. This telegram asked me to telephone a given Dublin subscriber between 1.30 and 2.30 that day. The telegram did not reach me until 2.50 p.m.

To-day I received the Department's reply as follows:—

"With reference to that portion of your communication of the 1adh instant, I have to inform you that the re-direction of your letters was not carried out as the form which you state to have been handed in at ——— Post Office was apparently mislaid.

"Attention has been drawn to the matter and the inconvenience occasioned is regretted."

Pretty cool, isn't it? and nothing whatever about the telegram. It was obvious from the wording of the message that it should reach me before 2.30 p.m., yet it was 4½ hours in transit. This works out at about 10 m.p.h., so perhaps the explanation is that there was no line available and the Department dispatched a messenger on a pedal cycle from Dublin! Perhaps also the reason why the Department has not dealt with that part of my complaint is that the special messenger who cycled the 45 miles has not yet sufficiently recovered from his exertions to give an explanation.—Yours, etc.,

A. MARSHALL.

DEPUTY QUESTIONS REDUCED GRANTS

At South Cork Board of Public Assistance yesterday, in reply to a resolution from the Board in regard to the cost of social services, Dr. Ward, Parliamentary Secretary, wrote, stating that the allocation of grants towards assistance in kind was made in proportion to the number of recipients of home assistance, and the numbers of these persons in South Cork had fallen from 4,326 in February, 1944, to 4,112 in February, 1945.

Mr. M. J. Corry, T.D., who presided, said the number in receipt of food vouchers in 1945 showed a drop of 9 per cent., but the grant was cut 14½ per cent. He maintained that the Department owed them £1,951, wrongly stopped.

Cruiskeen Lawn

By Myles na gCopaleen

DURING the last few months a considerable number of Dublin readers have—alas for frail human appetites for indulgence!—permitted themselves the pleasure of addressing letters to My Excellency. They are worried about a certain tyranny and they ask that I should be pleased forthwith to cause the same to be abated. Older admirers of my discourses will not have to be reminded of the inevitable seat of this complained-of incanceration, for a Dublin government, composed for the most part of flabby abandoned men, have seen fit to centre, through the obscene instrument of mercantile monopoly, the science of outraging the public upon one concern. I refer, as readers will by now have realised, to the Corps Imp Hire-iron, otherwise Curiosa Semper Erin—officially known, I gather, as see I E.? (In justice to this concern let me point out that few museums could better care for the Edwardian railway coach, few archæologists treat with more condign respect the venerable dirt that infests its ancient station premises. (Though doubts I have about the antiquity of certain of the Company's whiskeys)).

Well? The gravamen of the felonious occurrence so sorely complained of by my subjects relates to the activities of checkers, otherwise 'inspectors,' on tramp cars and ham knee buses. The vehicles are operated for conveying the public about the town, and are maintained by the public's money, the public being pleased to eat less and wear poorer clothing so that an unascertained usuring class, hereinafter known as the stockholders, may be fee-ed with dividend.

What then are the facts? I do not myself use these conveyances and cannot recite the facts from first tanned. (I do the other act—big Dodge saloon, fake producer plant rigged up on the back labelled "HOT—DO NOT TOUCH" and the vehicle plastered fore and aft with the magic letters "C.D." Possibly some foolish readers think there is a statutory regulation confining this badge to diplomats? But no. Anybody can wear it. Besides, I am a foreign Minister . . . . of a kind. Ask Sir John or David, or ask Kearney). What then are the facts as represented to me by honest correspondents?

Rural readers will doubt this but I am satisfied that it is true. A citizen, taking care not to get up on a tramcar, boards a tramcar, tenders not his fare, is concerned not to offer it, but gives it to the conductor in exchange for a ticket. This completes the customer's side of the transaction, or so one should imagine. Within two minutes a checker comes along and demands to see the ticket. The ticket is lost in the citizen's innumerable pockets. At enormous inconvenience it is retrieved and presented. The citizen, relieved by the conclusion of this extremely humiliating inquisition, stuffs the ticket away in some very unusual cranny in his clothes. Four minutes afterwards a different checker demands to see it. It cannot be found. The checker glares, goes away to cause all other passengers to show cause why they should not be flogged and imprisoned. Then he comes back to our citizen. The latter has to more or less undress to find the missing ticket.

Is it good enough?

This company is apparently convinced that its employees are dishonest. These employees are, in my view, decent and very hard-working men, and I recede from the view that they ambition to thieve the company's money or give free rides to pals. I opine that the company's insulting attitude to its employees affords the latter colourable entitlement to strike action. That, however, is the men's affair. The approach to me has been made by the public and in that behalf I now solemnly assure the company that the public of Dublin are absolutely sick and tired of the Gestapo régime to which they are subjected. There is absolutely no onus on the public to prove that bus and tram conductors are honest—the public doesn't perform this service for bakeries, dairies or grocers. The company had better think again, and quick. There are other ways of making sure about their dough. (Tell you an idea—get a transport man into the show?)

DUTIABLE GOODS SEIZED ON YACHT

A yacht owned by a Belfast man and sailing from Eire to Belfast was recently stopped by Customs officers near Bangor, Co. Down, and a number of bottles of sherry and other articles were found on board. The articles were seized, and the yacht detained.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Pomp and Circumstance

THE citizens of this previously respectable, agricultural, tea-drinking republic achieved a new height in worldly splendour yesterday afternoon, when the President, surrounded by an escort of motor-cyclists in yellow gloves, and surmounted by a squadron of thunderous fighting aircraft, arrived at Ballsbridge to open the Military Exhibition.

For some time before this event the guests had been arriving in large motor-cars. At least two of the guests wore full morning-dress.

There were also two British uniforms on view—the first to be seen in this country for many a long day. They were worn by Brigadier Wodehouse and Wing Commander Boyd, British Military and Air Attachés respectively. Brigadier Wodehouse wore a red-banded cap, with red tabs on his tunic. Wing-Commander Boyd had extensive loopings of gold cord as an addition to his R.A.F. uniform.

Into these scenes of splendour some of the guests precipitated themselves by bicycle, in the true republican spirit; only to find that no cycle park had been provided for them. The man at the gate to what might have been the cycle park said: "There's only one man leaves anything here, and that's his car, and he's the President."

Up and Down

So the President arrived, and left his car—a shining, dark-red American saloon with two chauffeurs—in the right place, inspected the guard of honour, and then walked up towards the entrance to the Exhibition, past rows of scarlet flowers, and faces pressed between the railings. There was a ripple of hand-clapping, and the President, very gracefully, tipped his top-hat to the crowd.

He achieved his place in the centre of the balcony, overlooking the main hall, beneath the tricolour, ingeniously agitated by an almost invisible electric fan. The trumpeters of No 1 Army Band burst forth into a fanfare; and most of the guests got tangled up. What happened was that some of them rose to their feet, some took off their hats, some looked about them vacantly, and others did nothing at all. That crisis passed, at the cost of no little embarrassment.

A moment later the band played the salute to the Colours, during the demonstration changing of the guard. Again the same thing happened. Some people stood to attention, others partly rose and fell back into their seats again. Even the Diplomatic Corps was a prey to indecision.

Twice more the same thing happened as the old and new guards exchanged routine compliments. The guests paid homage to both occasions with a variety of poses ranging from the seated to the rigidly vertical.

Into Action

Later in the evening the Tattoo was exposed, at last, to the public gaze. It began, of all things, with a new musical fantasia entitled "After Duty," produced, heroically, by no less than 360 instrumentalists, all working away at the same time. This massed band, of pipes and drums and brass and reed, stood a little statically in the centre of the arena and played for what eventually turned out to be a very considerable period.

They were, however, a fine sight, with the pipers in saffron, and the other departments in blue, green and gold.

No sooner did the massed bands march off than the arena took on an altogether more menacing appearance. Camouflaged soldiers in battle-dress, with foliage draped around their steel helmets, took up positions behind the double-banks and hurdles. In another moment the jumping enclosure became one shattering, crackling inferno of sound. An attacking force poured in. Mortars, machine-guns, even 75-pounders, erupted into flame and noise. Huge explosions uprooted the turf of the jumping enclosure. Black clouds of smoke poured away over Anglesea road.

Benburb And All That

This most effective, and entirely deafening engagement came to an end with the defenders' strong-point in actual flame.

There was a peaceful moment while a vast concourse of L.D.F. men, in white singlets, performed graceful Sokol evolutions in time to music; a time of general panic while motor-cyclists, at 50 m.p.h., literally leaped the fences of the jumping course; another quiet moment while infantry provided a demonstration of massed precision drill; and then came the Battle of Benburb.

Benburb, in the last few months, has become rather more familiar to the ordinary citizen than Waterloo. Weeks of preparation have gone into its creation. The weeks were worth it; for the Battle of Benburb, though brief, makes a spectacle that would earn a word of approval from Cecil B. de Mille.

The fighting is done with masterly ferocity. General Munroe and Owen Roe O'Neill make princely figures in their flowing wigs.

I could, indeed, have taken a great deal more of the Battle of Benburb; but it had to give way to more pagent—a parade of the Irish armies of former times. This was equally spectacular, with chariots, beards, wolfhounds and all you could wish for.

It was a fine night. It would be interesting to see what would happen if it rained.

Advice Wanted

It would seem—and very nice, too—that this previously respectable, agricultural, tea-drinking republic is going in for public shows on a large scale. The Thomas Davis celebrations are on the way. With the onset of winter may we not look forward to State balls, with decorations, white gloves and programmes from the head footman?

But if we are going to have public shows on a large scale, would somebody, before something terrible happens, sit down and work out just what, exactly, everybody is supposed to do.

After yesterday's ceremony I asked a number of high-ranking officers what they thought everybody should have done when the fanfare was sounded, when the salute to the Colours was played, and when the guards exchanged compliments. One and all shuffled a little, and said that officers saluted, of course, during the salute to the Colours. They said that they weren't quite sure about the fanfare, and didn't know anything at all about civilians.

This still leaves me shaking in my civilian spats, afraid to move lest I get out of line. Could we not have some hints on etiquette from the Government Information Bureau?

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON.

MONDAY NIGHT.

MR. SEAN O'CASEY'S comedy, "Purple Dust," is one of two plays with which the Old Vic Company will open its winter season at the Liverpool Playhouse. Mr. Eric Capon, producer at the open-air theatre at Regent's Park, has been appointed producer at the Playhouse, and he has chosen Mr. Peter Ustinov's "Tragedy of Good Intentions" to share the honours with "Purple Dust."

Mr. O'Casey introduces two characters in his play, Stoke and Poges, who have bought a Tudor manor in Eire, and most of the humour comes from the trials of both, in endeavouring to live like proverbial lords of the manor.

Food From Dominions

The Dominions are to come to the aid of Britain with increased food supplies, with the end of lease-lend. Several hundred thousand oranges are to be shipped from South Africa next month, for orange juice supplies, now distributed at nominal charge to all children. Previously, the whole of Britain's supply came from the United States.

Although food is, admittedly, far from plentiful here, prospects are not so bad as some writers say. It became known to-day that Britain has refused cheese shipments from Denmark, so fully are Dominion supplies to be maintained. Canada has increased bacon shipments more than fivefold during the war.

The end of lease-lend means that Britain would prefer to buy as much food as possible in the sterling area, which includes Eire.

New Use For Plane Plastic

Many technical advances made under the stress of war are being turned to peace-time use. For example, Perspex, the transparent plastic material used in every kind of aircraft throughout the war, is now in general use in corrugated sheet form for roof and wall lighting. The sheets weigh only nine-tenths of a pound to the square foot, and are made to fit existing standards of corrugated iron and asbestos cement. By interspersing Perspex in chequer board pattern upon the roofing, a shadow-free light is obtained. The sheets have the advantage that they require no frames or lead flashings, and that they dispense with the need for glazing

Smart House-building

One of four types of prefabricated houses now being erected in various parts of Britain is the "Phœnix," which needs only 400 man-hours on the site. It has two bedrooms of equal size, a living room, bathroom, kitchen and larder. It has also a small shed at the back of the house. The bedrooms are heated by hot air, drawn through pipes from the coal fireplace in the living room. The kitchen is equipped with refrigerator and other modern conveniences; all wardrobes and cupboards are set into the walls, and electricity and gas are laid on. The only real snag is that hard knocks on the outside wall can cause holes that are difficult to patch up.

The houses are officially termed as being suitable for a married couple and two children. Rent is about 10s. a week and rates and water rate 4s. 6d.

"What do YOU mean by Headaches?"

If a headache to you is just a dull heavy sort of feeling, pass on and think yourself lucky. A headache to me is a head that's sore all over, something that the slightest noise brings a hundred red hot needles searing through the brain. Thank heaven I know the answer now. If I wake up feeling a little under the weather, I take a couple of Anti-Kamnia tablets and in ten minutes time I'm a different woman. A.K. is simply wonderful. It isn't just aspirin. In fact, it has no aspirin at all. It's an absolutely unique formula for the relief of any sort of pain and I've never known it to fail.

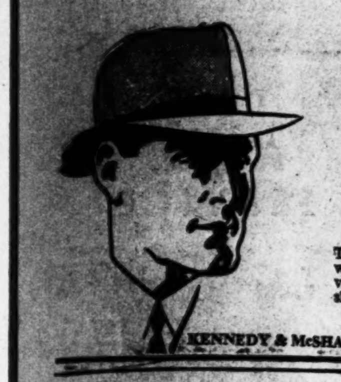

Any chemist can give you A.K., and if you aren't delighted with what it does, he'll give you your money back. Try a packet to-day. 1/3 a box.

Winding Up 45,000 Firms' War Work

THE British Ministry of Labour believes it will not be necessary to exercise the power of direction over workers released through the cancellation of war contracts, an official said, yesterday, after the issue of the text of a letter sent to 45,000 firms engaged on war production.

This power will probably not be used unless voluntary transfers to priority work are insufficient. With the Japanese war over, housing has become a first priority, and coal mining and distribution, transport, textiles, clothing, footwear, food, agriculture, and hospitals are also regarded as of high importance.

CANCELLATIONS

The letter dealt with the cancellation of war contracts by the Admiralty, Board of Trade and Ministries of Supply, Aircraft Production and Labour and National Service, and it traced the transition from war to peace production in order that over 1,000,000 workers may be released within eight weeks and further releases follow.

Rumanian Plot Exposed

The Rumanian Ministry of the Interior, in an announcement quoted by Bucharest Radio, said last night that Rumanian police had discovered two terrorist organisation which are alleged to have planned the overthrow of the present Government of Dr. Groza, the assassination of its members and the security of the State in general.

Members of one of the two groups, about 20 of whom have been arrested, were described in the official announcement as "hirelings of the former Premier General Radescu," and accused of "trying to create discord among the United Nations.

Dublin Fire Outbreak

The promptitude of a number of men in removing oil and petrol from a blazing garage at Gran[illegible] place, Dublin, early this morning averted what might have been a very serious outbreak of fire.

Two motor cars, however, were destroyed, and the building was badly damaged. A third car and some tyres were saved, and a number of pigs in a neighbouring stable were removed to safety.

The outbreak was got under control by one section of the Fire Brigade within half-an-hour. The garage, which is the property of Mr. J. Ward, Griffith avenue, is at the rear of tenement houses in Lower Dominick street.

Two business premises in Dublin were damaged by fire last night. The first outbreak occurred in the confectionery shop, 125-126 T[illegible] Coombe, where the roof had caught fire, but the Fire Brigade quelled it in a short time. Subsequently the Brigade dealt with an outbreak at the premises, 208 Rathmines road, where a fruiterer's business is carried on. In both cases the damage was slight.
